

READING CIRCLE COURSE OF STATE TEACHERS IS OUT

The reading circle course for Oregon teachers for the current year was issued Wednesday by J. A. Churchill, state superintendent of public instruction. One book of those listed in the course must be read by a teacher to enable her to qualify for registration of her certificate between November 1, 1919, and November 1, 1920.

Books of a vocational character are read under direction of the correspondence department of the Oregon Agricultural college and those of a general educational nature under direction of the correspondence department of the University of Oregon. According to Mr. Churchill, many teachers have been so impressed with the value of the course that they have read four or five books of the course in addition to the one required by law.

To assist him in raising the standards of the teachers' profession, Mr. Churchill has appealed to the teachers through the medium of the state course, county institutes and all departments of the state educational work. In this connection he says: "While the high standards for certification may cause a temporary short age of teachers, it is only by insisting upon these qualifications that we can have effective work done in the public schools. This will, of course, mean that teachers must receive higher salaries so that they can afford to make adequate preparation for their work. The hearty support the reading circle work is receiving throughout the state shows that the teachers are determined to join the state department, insisting that none but trained teachers may enter the profession."

Following is the list of books to be used this year in the reading circle course:

TEMPORARY CARE OF CHILDREN NOT RULED

Private persons entrusted with the temporary care of children by parents who work out, can not be regarded as coming under the jurisdiction of the child welfare commission according to an opinion prepared by Assistant Attorney General Van Winkle. The law, Van Winkle declares, includes only such agencies, societies and institutions incorporated for the purpose of receiving children to care for upon commitment from the courts.

In the event, however, that private persons should fail to properly care for children placed in their keeping, the child welfare commission can, upon a proper showing, have the child removed from their charge by a commitment from a court placing the child in the keeping of some regularized recognized child caring organization, the opinion states.

A campaign against Sunday theatricals is being waged by the ministers of Pendleton.
